Intro to Endnote: Importing Citations

This information can be found in video form at:

Welcome to Endnote! The first thing you’ll want to learn is how to get your citations in endnote.

Library

Search WISE@ WESTMINSTER COLLEGE

stalin cult of personality

Let’s start in WISE

4. The Rise of Stalin's Personality Cult
by Robert C. Tucker
Source: The American Historical Review v84 n2 (19790401): 347-366
Held by: Westminster College McGill Library
Intro to Endnote: Importing Citations

I’ll click “cite” in the menu to the right of the source I’d want.

In the pop-up, click “Cite with Endnote”

Depending on your browser, you may need to confirm the download.

Now let’s go back to Endnote. In the menu up top, you should hover over “My References” and then select “Import References”
Intro to Endnote: Importing Citations

Select the correct .ris file from your computer then, under Import Option, go to Select Favorites (This will make it much easier for future imports)

You'll see a super long list of file formats. Select RefMan RIS then click the blue “Copy to Favorites” button. (Now your drop down menu for Select Favorites will be much more manageable.)
Intro to Endnote: Importing Citations

Confirm that you’ve selected RefMan RIS and then select where you want your reference to go. [Unfiled] is fine for now, but you may want to select You’ll get a confirmation.

Hey look, there it is! When you’re on-campus, you can access the article using the “Links” button. If you’ll be working off-campus, you may want to attach the .pdf with the paperclip tool for easy access.